The Best Plaster

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Liniment and bound on to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains and is certain to please anyone suffering from that disease. Sold by all dealers.

The truth may be mighty, but a lie will travel faster.

If people with symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble could realize their danger they would without loss of time commence taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. This great remedy stops the pain and the irregularities, strengthens and builds up these organs and there is no danger of Bright's disease or other serious disorder. Do not disregard the early symptoms. O. G. Schaefer and Red Cross Drug Co.

DEATH MAKES INROADS ON U. S. PENSION ROLLS

Washington, Oct. 21.—Death's invasion of the fast thinning ranks of war veterans caused 48,312 names to be dropped from the pension rolls of the United States last year. Of this number 32,831 were survivors of the civil war. The total loss to the pension roll from all causes was 51,581.

In striking contrast to these figures, comprised in the annual report of Vespasian Warner, commissioner of pensions, is the statement that the government paid out in pensions in the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1909, $161,973,703, which the commissioner declares is the largest amount ever disbursed for pensions in one year.

Summarized, the report shows these facts: Number of pensioners at the beginning of the year, 951,637; number of new pensioners added to the roll, 46,988; pensioners on roll at close of the year 946,194, a net decrease of 5,493. Survivors of the civil war on the roll now number 693,961.

Commissioner Warner explains that the increase in the amount paid out for pensions was due principally to the large number of pensioners placed on the roll under the act of Feb. 6, 1907, granting $12, $15, and $20, to survivors of the war with Mexico and the civil war, on reaching the ages of 62, 70 and 75 respectively.

Catarrah Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrah Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. A thing of duty is seldom a joy forever.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, snokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm will master catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. All druggists sell the 50 cent size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

The Balm is used without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation. Ely's Cream Balm contains no cocaine, mercury nor other harmful drugs.

Adventure of a Sunfish

Jonah's Experience with the Whale Duplicated

"The aggravating independence of the black bass in Sand pond up our way," said Hon. Thomas James Ham, editor of the Citizen at R—, "is exceeded only by the cool impudence of the pickerel in those waters, unless it may be by the tenacity of life of thin sunfish. Judging from a little Jonah and the whale sort of play by one of those pickerel and a Sand pond sunfish that I witnessed, I don't know but what the sunfish is entitled to ranking place.

"In company with a friend, I had gone to Sand pond with the intention of coming home with a few of those aggravatingly independent black bass. We depended on catching our live bait from the schools of minnows in the outlet of the pond.

"Fishing with tiny minnow hooks tied to black linen thread for lines, we had nearly filled our pail with bait when my companion hooked a sunfish. As he was drawing it slowly in a large pickerel darted out from somewhere among the thick weeds at the margin of the outlet and made a vicious strike at the sunfish just as it was pulled out.

"The splash of the big fish's tail as it turned after its unsuccessful strike threw the water almost into the boat. The sunfish was quickly dropped back into the pond, we both being curious to see if the pickerel would have the audacity to make another rush for it.

"The little fish had gone scarcely two feet from the boat, with the hook in its upper jaw, when the pickerel promptly showed that it had all its impudence with it. It shot from its lair among the tiny pads, where it had disappeared, and seized the sunfish.

"The momentum of this second dash carried the pickerel ahead with the sunfish in its jaw three or four feet. There it stopped in plain sight of us and deliberately made its preparations for gorging its prey, giving us purposely, I verily believe, an exhibition of its processes as well as of its utter disregard for our presence.

"The pickerel had seized the sunfish tail first, but by a series of quick, jerky movements of its big jaws it turned the sunfish until its head was where its tail had been. Then the pickerel gave a gulp or two, and the sunfish disappeared somewhere in the depths of the big and impudent fish.

"The sunfish seemed to be about three inches long. After swallowing its prey the pickerel remained motionless a few seconds, as if gloating over its captive and illustrating its contempt for our presence. Then it turned and started for deep water.

"The hook was fast in the sunfish, and the sunfish was a foot or so down in the pickerel's interior, and we could see no way in which the pickerel could reach the point it had started for unless it gave back the hook and the fish, took them and the boat along with it, or gave itself up to the fisherman. The first we believed quite impossible. The second we had our doubts about. The third we hoped for.

"When the line drew taut the pickerel seemed to be for the first time aware that it had got itself into a situation that might make trouble for it, and for a time it seemed that the big and now disturbed fish had some intention of taking the boat and us along with it after all. The line was small, but very stout, but as wire snells are not regarded as any too formidable tackle to have next to a pickerel when he takes the hook, the prospects for the line holding out against that big fellow until he was captured were by no means assuring.

"My friend and I understood pretty well the handling of light tackle, and if the pickerel had persisted in retaining the sunfish and in his efforts to kidnap the boat and us he certainly would have been our meat. For two or three minutes the big, strong fish was so handled that the slight minnow line defied his attempts to snap it in two, and he was hauled from the water and almost landed.

"At that critical moment in the pickerel's fight he must have concluded that it was better for him to give up his breakfast rather than lose forever the opportunity of getting another, for he set his internal arrangements to work disgorging the sunfish, dropped back into the water, and went his way.

"The sunfish, still fast to the hook, had run the gauntlet of the pickerel's spiked jaws and had been a good while in its stomach. Such an experience, it would seem, should have been enough to satisfy the ambition of any ordinary fish. So we thought at any rate when we released it from the hook and tossed into the water, as we supposed, dead.

"Well, this fish wasn't an ordinary fish. It was a Sand pond fish, and wasn't so easily satisfied as all that. It lay on the water stiff and motionless and badly scared for a few seconds, and then began to shiver and wriggle about. Presently it dived beneath the surface, swimming strong, but like a cripple. It was quickly surrounded by scores of full grown sunfish, which escorted the wounded little fellow tenderly away until they were hidden among the rushes.

"We got quite a few of those aggravatingly independent black bass, before we left the pond."
